Tips for a Competitive Grant Application

Over the years, the jury awarding the Native Creative Development, and the Master Artist Initiative grants have complied few suggestions for prospective applicants.

- Turn your application in as early as possible.
- Always double check your budget math.
- Submit a reasonable budget based on realistic costs.
- Submit work samples that reflect your ability to carry out the grant project proposed.
- Submit images that aren't too tiny, images that are clear and show your work in the best light.
- Do not submit images that have extraneous objects in them, or composite images that show multiple types of work or pieces in a group photo.
- Images that show a cohesive body of work contribute to a competitive grant application.
- For film submission, contact Longhouse staff in advance to determine useable formats.
